It includes both your medical records and personal information such as your name, social security, address and phone number.

PART 2- HOW FCAAC MAY USE AND DISCLOSE HEALTH INFORMATION ABOUT YOU

Generally, FCAAC may not use or disclose your personal health information without your permission. Further, once your permission has been obtained, FCAAC must use or disclose your personal health information in accordance with the specific terms of that permission. The following are the circumstances under which FCAAC is permitted by the law to use or disclose your personal health information:

Also, FCAAC is permitted to disclose your personal health information within and among its workforce in order to accomplish these same purposes. However, even with your permission, FCAAC is still required to limit such uses or disclosures to the minimal amount of personal health information that is reasonably required to provide those services or complete those activities.

Examples of Treatment Activities. FCAAC may use or disclose your health information to a physician, nurse, or other healthcare professional providing treatment to you. Treatment activities include: (a) the provision, coordination, or management of health care and related services by health care providers; (b) consultation between health care providers relating to a patient; or (c) the referral of a patient for health care from one health care provider to another.

B. As Required by Law

We may use or disclose your health information when we are required to do so by law.

Abuse or Neglect.

We may disclose your health information to appropriate authorities if we reasonably believe that you are a possible victim of abuse, neglect or domestic violence or the possible victim of other crimes. We may disclose your health information to the extent necessary to avert a serious threat to your health or safety or the health or safety of others.

National Security.

We may disclose to military authorities the health information of Armed Forces personnel under certain circumstances. We may disclose to authorized federal officials health information required for lawful intelligence, counterintelligence and other national security activities. We may disclose to correctional institution or law enforcement officials having lawful custody of protected health information or inmate or patient under certain circumstances.

C. Miscellaneous Permitted Activities

We may also use or disclose medical information when contacting you by phone, email, text message or mail to remind you of appointments, treatments, referrals, authorizations and test results.

D. All Other Situations With Your Authorization

Except as otherwise permitted or required, as described above and set forth in HIPAA, FCAAC may not use or disclose your personal health information without your written authorization. You may give FCAAC written authorization to use your health information or to disclose it to anyone for any purpose. Uses and disclosures not described in this Notice will be made only with your authorization. If you give us an authorization, you may revoke it in writing at any time. Your revocation will not affect any use or disclosures permitted by your authorization while it was in effect.

E. Communicating with a Patient's Family, Friends, or Others Involved in the Patient's Care

Even though HIPAA requires health care providers, like FCAAC, to protect patient privacy, providers are permitted, in most circumstances, to communicate with the patient's family, friends, or others involved in their care or payment for care. This section is intended to clarify these HIPAA requirements so that FCAAC does not unnecessarily withhold your health information from these persons.

Patient is Present and has the Capacity to Make Health Care Decisions.

If the patient is present and has the capacity to make health care decisions, a health care provider may discuss the patient's health information with a family member, friend, or other person if the patient agrees or, when given the opportunity, does not object. A health care provider also may share information with these persons if, using professional judgment, he or she decides that the patient does not object. In either case, the health care provider may share or discuss only the information that the person involved needs to know about the patient's care or payment for care.

The following are a few examples:

- FCAAC may discuss a patient's bill with the patient's adult daughter who is with the patient at the patient's medical appointment and has questions about the charges.
- FCAAC may discuss the drugs a patient needs to take with the patient's health aide who has accompanied the patient to a medical appointment.
- A nurse may discuss a patient's health status with the patient's brother if she informs the patient she is going to do so and the patient does not object.

BUT:

- A nurse may not discuss a patient's condition with the patient's brother after the patient has stated she does not want her family to know about her condition.

Patient is Not Present or is Incapacitated.

If the patient is not present or is incapacitated, a health care provider may share the patient’s information with family, friends, or others as long as the health care provider determines, based on professional judgment, that it is in the best interest of the patient. When someone other than a friend or family member is involved, the health care provider must be reasonably sure that the patient asked the person to be involved in his or her care or payment for care. The health care provider may discuss only the information that the person involved needs to know about the patient’s care or payment. FCAAC will also use its professional judgment and experience with common practice to make reasonable inferences of your best interest in allowing a person to pick up filled prescriptions, medical supplies, x-rays or other similar forms of health information.

The following are a couple of examples:

- FCAAC may give information regarding a patient’s drug dosage to the patient’s health aide who calls the provider with questions about the particular prescription.

BUT:

- A nurse may not tell a patient’s friend about a past medical problem that is unrelated to the patient’s current condition.

PART 3 – PATIENT RIGHTS

In addition to the restrictions on our use and disclosure of your health information, you have the following specific rights regarding the use and disclosure of your health information:

Restrictions of Use and Disclosures.

You may request that FCAAC restrict the use and disclosure of your health information for various reasons such as restricting that certain health information not be disclosed to a specific family member, for example. Although there are numerous reasons why you may want FCAAC to restrict the use and disclosure of your health information, FCAAC is not required to agree to a requested restriction except requests to restrict disclosure of your protected health information to a health plan if (a) the disclosure is for the purpose of carrying out payment or health care operations and is not otherwise required by law; and (b) the protected health information pertains solely to a health care item or service for which you, or person other than the health plan on behalf of you, has paid FCAAC in full.

While FCAAC is generally not required to agree to any requested restriction, if FCAAC agrees to a restriction, FCAAC is bound not to use or disclose your personal healthcare information in violation of such restriction, except in certain emergency situations. FCAAC will not accept a request to restrict uses or disclosures that are otherwise required by law.

Right to Request Confidential Communications.

You may request in writing, and FCAAC must accommodate reasonable requests by you, to receive communications of protected health information from FCAAC by alternative means or at alternative locations. FCAAC may condition the provision of reasonable accommodation on (a) when appropriate, information as to how payment, if any, will be handled; and (b) specification of an alternative address or other method of contact. FCAAC may not require an explanation from you as the basis for the request as a condition of providing communications on a confidential basis.

Access to Health Information.

You have the right to look at or get copies of your health information, with limited exceptions. You may request that FCAAC provide copies in a format other than photocopies such as a PDF format via electronic mail. FCAAC will use the format you request unless we cannot practicably do so. However, providing copies of your health information in any format other than paper copies, such as electronically, comes at a risk that your information may be stolen or obtained by others. You must make a request in writing to obtain access to your health information. You may obtain a form to request access by using the contact information listed at the end of this Notice.

Amending Health Information and Records.

You have the right to request that your health information or a specific record be amended provided you do so in writing to the person designated at the end of this Notice and you provide reasons why such health information or record should be amended. Although you have a right to request that your health information or records be amended, FCAAC may deny your request under certain circumstances such as when the information requesting to be amended was not created by FCAAC or the information is accurate and complete.

If you want an accounting of our use and disclosure of your health information, then please do so in writing to the person designated at the end of this Notice. We will respond in writing to your request.

Right to Obtain Paper Copy of Privacy Notice.

You have the right to request a paper copy of this Notice upon request even if you agreed to receive it electronically.
